Dear Fellow Investors

May was a difficult month for most Australasian funds, mainly because of the "Telecom factor" and the Australian sharemarket was down 2.0% in Australian dollar terms (and 6.3% in New Zealand dollars).

Telecom had a big impact in May as it contributed 1.4% to the NZX50 Gross Index's positive 0.8% return. The following table illustrates why Telecom's high index weighting was so important.

May weightings, performances and contributions

	Index Weighting	May Performance	May Contribution
Telecom	11.1%	+13.7%	+1.4%
Cavalier	0.5%	+12.9%	+0.1%
NZ Exchange	0.7%	+10.8%	+0.1%
Pyne Gould	0.2%	+10.6%	0.0%
Mainfreight	1.9%	+8.1%	+0.1%

Telecom is the second largest company behind Fletcher Building, which has a 13.9% index weighting. Thus when Telecom went up the index went up but most funds are substantially underweight because of the telco's uncertain future and poor performance over recent years. Your Aggressive Fund is no exception as Telecom had a May end weighting of only 3.1%.

The Australian sharemarket had a poor month as concerns increased over an economic slowdown in China, higher domestic interest rates at home and the impact of these on the housing market and consumer spending. These concerns were exacerbated by the announcement that Gross Domestic Product contracted 1.2% in the March quarter although the Queensland floods were a major contributor to this.

Nevertheless the performance of our Australian share portfolio was satisfactory as it appreciated 0.4% compared with a decline of 2.0% in the benchmark index.

The outlook for the world economy and financial markets is more uncertain than it has been for some time. The economic recovery in the United States is slowing, a number of European countries have serious problems and China is also showing signs of a slowdown.

The big question mark is how will Governments and Central Banks respond to a global slowdown; will the United States Government try and implement Quantitative Easing (QE3)? At present that looks unlikely but investors should never underestimate the determination of the US Federal Reserve Board to ensure that there isn't another major economic downturn.

In this uncertain environment the Aggressive Fund will reduce its exposure to equities.
